GLASGOW
GLASGOW

AND ITS ENVIRONS

GLASGOW is a city, an important commercial seaport and royal burgh, the seat of a university, parliam entary and municipal borough and the head of a poor combination, sheriff ordinary and small debt court. About a half mile in extent, and of a prosperity in its system, the river Clyde and the bridge situated in the county of Lanark, on both banks of the river Clyde and about 20 miles south-east from its mouth, and is 357 miles from London, 44 from Edinburgh, 177 from Aberdeen, 34 from ayr, 29 from Stirling, 213 from Manchester, 212 from Liverpool, 95 from Carlisle, 196 from Dublin and 127 from Belfast.
The river Clyde divides the city into two unequal parts, the chief portion occupying the northern bank, and communicating with the southern division by means of several bridges. In 1345 the principal street was Drygate, now a small thoroughfare a little south of the cathedral, and some small tenements near the head of the street once formed part of the town walls. Some of the old streets, of which the most important is Montrose; Rotten row, a continuation of Drygate west-wards, was then also one of the chief streets. The famous Saltmarket, a street running southwards from the Creek, was likewise ancient, the easternmost, at the bend Fisher's and extends to the Town bridge; and Fishergate, now called Bridgegate, a narrow street leading from the Saltmarket to Stockwell or Victoria bridge on the west, was then the principal thoroughfare of the city, and the portion of the modern town, two main lines of streets run east and west, the southernmost of these, near to, and almost parallel with the Clyde, is nearly four miles in length and 60 feet wide. It was laid out in 1766, and was at different points as Trongate and Argyle street, at the end of which it crosses the Kelvin stream; east of the Cross it is continued under the name of Gallgowgate. The other thoroughfare consists of the street which runs east to west, and is bounded by Cowcadden street, and deflecting southwards is connected by Buchanan street with the central thoroughfare called George street, prolonged eastwards as Duke street. The principal street, running from north to south, is about a mile in length and 50 feet broad, and bears successively the names of Castle street, Kirk street, High street, and the Saltmarket. The point of its intersection with the southernmost of the streets near the Cross, and before the population had progressed west-ard was regarded as the nucleus of the city. The streets between the two chief thoroughfares are regularly laid out and are wide. These become narrower the farther Ingram street, St. Vincent street, George street, Buchanan street, the handsomest business street in the city, and Sauchiehall street, which runs from Buchanan street westward nearly a mile and a third of the stream to the west, being Rutherglen bridge, next Richmond Park foot-bridge, then Gowan Street bridge, and lastly, St. Andrew's suspension bridge, which leads from Glasgow green to McNeil street on the south bank. South of the foot of the Saltmarket, is the Albert bridge, an iron structure erected in place of the old Hutchestown bridge, which formerly spanned the Clyde at this point.
The foundation stone was laid 5 June, 1871. The bridge was opened 21 June, 1871. It consists of three arches developed design, and cost with its adjuncts nearly £5,000. About 160 yards farther west the river is crossed by the South-western Railway, a bridge, rebuilt in 1900, at a cost of £30,000, and consisting of five river spans of 75 feet clear each, and two street spans of 65 feet each, each pier consisting of two granite piers, built on cylindrical concrete foundations, at a depth of 90 feet below high water level. The bridge is connected by a branch to the general terminal station of the Caledonian Railway, which, as well as the North British, and Glasgow and South-Western Railway Companies, has access to the dock. There are three graving docks at Gowan, the last of which was opened 27 April, 1859. The dock, commenced in 1856, is 860 feet long, with a width at the entrance of 83 feet, in the body of the dock at the bottom of 81 feet, and a width at the top of 115 feet. The depth of water on the sill is 26 feet, and it is divided by steel gates into an outer length of 460 feet, and an inner length of 420 feet. The cost was about £553,000, including payment to B.M. King George V. then Duke of York, 10th Sept., 1914.

Fishing boats and their implements, belonging to Glasgow port, are distinguished by the letters "G. W."

The Forth and Clyde Canal, begun in 1768, under the direction of John Smeaton, the celebrated engineer, and opened to navigation on July 25, 1770, at the termination at Grangemouth, about 10 statute miles south-east from Stirling, and through which port sea-going vessels of about 80 tons burthen can pass to Glasgow or London, and from them to the Clyde or Forth. The locks are 20 feet wide and 74 feet long, admitting vessels about 68 feet in length, and little under 20 feet in breadth. Vessels drawing up to 5 feet 6 inches can pass through the entrance of the Firth of Clyde and the Firth of Forth, and in the river Caren, between port and the Firth of Forth, there is about 20 feet of water at spring and 15 feet at neap tides. For the accommodation of vessels too large to enter the canal, connection is made with the sea by means of the docks opened at Grangemouth, on the estuary of the Forth. These docks are situated at the eastern entrance of the canal, so that timber can be cheaply transported by water to Grangemouth and thence to the rivers Clyde and Forth.

The new or Grange Dock, opened 8 Oct. 1906, is directly connected by a large entrance lock with the Firth of Forth, and the whole of the shipping now passes into the canal through the entrance of this lock. It is 23 feet wide, with a depth of water on the sill of 31 feet 9 inches at high water ordinary spring tides, and of 27 feet 9 inches at high water ordinary neap tides. Forty hydraulic cranes, raising from two to ten tons each, and capable of lifting a number of timbers and other merchandise, and there are 45 acres of water, forming a timber pond for the storage of square timber, and a very large area of ground for the storage of deals and pinning-down systems, which are not at present, as the docks provides communication with all parts of Scotland. The total length of the canal is 35 miles, its western entrance being at Bowling, a little east of Distillery, and its eastern entrance at Stenhouse Ferry. Glasgow section, which branches off at Maryhill, about 14 miles north of the city, takes a winding course through the northern suburbs, and includes, or is connected with, a number of warehouses and basins; at Monkland bottom, the Monkland Canal, opened 30 Nov. 1792, runs to Coatbridge.

The railways converging on Glasgow are the Caledonian, the North British, the Glasgow and South-Western, the Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmanyrock joint line, and the Glasgow, Port Glasgow and Greenock joint line. The new and early connections in Glasgow are the Caledonian Central station, Gordon street, Buchanan Street station, head of Buchanan street and Eglinton street; the North British, Queen street station, King Street; the West of Scotland, Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmanyrock (joint line), St. Enoch square; Glasgow and Paisley (joint), Gorbals, Strathbungo and Crossmyloof and Central, Gordon street (Caledonian). The Glasgow District Subway, constructed in 1890-96, under the direction of Messrs. Simpson & Wilson, engineers, consists of two parallel tunnels, taking a circular route of 85 miles, and including a line through the模仿, the western district of Glasgow, portions of the burghs of Partick, Govan and Kinning Park, and a large part of the western south-western area of the city. Commencing at St. Enoch square, it ascends Buchanan street, Buchanan street, through caddens to the Cross at the Established Church Normal School, under New City Road and Great Western road to Kelvin Bridge, under the Kelvin and the hill at Hillhead to Parkhead and the north bank of the Clyde. There are 12 stations on the route. The power station is on the south side of Scotland street, and the trains are worked by steam wire cables, one cable going round the entire circle, and the other being the opposite direction, similarly going round the second circle.

The Glasgow Central Railway, part of the Caledonian system, of which the eastern section was opened for passenger traffic on November 18th 1865, extends from the Caledonian station, early, and terminates at Rutherglen, where it joins the main line.

Regular and frequent communication by steam boats is maintained with Liverpool, Cork, Limerick, Galway, Dublin, Belfast, London, and the Western and Northern Highlands of Ireland.

The Clyde Tunnels: In 1895 three tunnels, each 15 feet in diameter, were bored under the Clyde from the west of Finneston street to Mavis Bank, Govan, on the west of the city, at a cost of over £250,000, by the Harbour Commissioners, the right of way being acquired for the central one for passengers, but the latter is not now in use.

COMMERCE, TRADE, AND MANUFACTURES.

Fishing was the earliest branch of productive industry established in the city, and the greatest was the fleet of fishers, who, about 1345, laid out Bridgegate, then called Fishergate, appears to have been the first commercial company established in the city—fish, chiefly salmon, then being the staple product. The export has increased till it now amounts to quantities to France, and different French productions were taken in exchange. In 1667 a whale fishing company was formed and a soap factory was established, but the production has only increased from time to time, and for a time only. Vessels were transported from their embarkation in the Virginian tobacco trade.

The commerce of Glasgow was at first carried on in vessels chartered from English ports, although it is on record that this city was in possession of shipping prior to the year 1545, and in the reign of Charles II., the "Leon" was chartered from the English port. In 1748, the trade with the Dutch. It was not until the year 1718, however, that a ship built on the Clyde, and the property of Glasgow citizens, crossed the Atlantic. At that time a good supply of tobacco was brought from the West Indies, and English merchants here were enabled to dispose of the article upon more advantageous terms than those of London and other commercial towns in England, a result which produced great international trade, and led to the English tobacco merchants to charge those of Glasgow with fraud on the reasonable. An enquiry was eventually made before Parliament, in consequence of which various restrictions were imposed on the trade, and until 1775 it declined, but subsequently revived, and at length attained such a degree of prosperity for several years previous to the American war (1775-1815); that the annual imports of tobacco into Glasgow were usually from 150,000 to 300,000). Annual imports were usually from 12,500 to 13,000 tons; in the year immediately preceding that disastrous war 57,143 hogsheads were imported. From 1,200 to 1,300 hogsheads only of the annual import were sold for home consumption; the remainder indeed this trade, at that period, was carried on with bisness grossed nearly the whole available capital and commercial enterprise of Glasgow.

The merchants and manufacturers of Glasgow, their intercourse with America being interrupted by the war in 1775, introduced the muslin trade, and prosecuted it with great spirit and success. In the present century, the high price paid for the embroidery of muslins enabled thousands of young women in Ayrshire to earn a living by what is still termed "weaving" cloth. From 1831 to 1843, this industry was extended to the North of Ireland, especially Belfast, but Glasgow still remains the chief seat of this manufacture. On the application of steam power to cotton manufacture, the attention of the aristocracy was attracted to the cotton trade and manufactures in Glasgow largely helped to increase its wealth and advance its prosperity, and almost all varieties of textile manufacture are now carried on here.

The iron trade also has long been one of the staple industries of Glasgow, and its close proximity to the iron field gives it in this respect a material advantage. The Glasgow Exchange is the scene of sale for this vast business, and the Clyde ports are principally those of shipment.

In shipbuilding, Glasgow deservedly holds a high position. Its building yards are both numerous and extensive, and the vessels constructed here, whether of timber, iron, or steel, have attained a world celebrity, 132 vessels, with a tonnage of 1,044,831 tons, having been built in 1905, and in addition 54 vessels of 15,499 tons were built for foreigners.
In the coasting trade, the following, in 1909, was the number of steam vessels that entered with cargoes and ballast, in and out, at the Port of Glasgow, in the general coasting trade, and 2,650, of 701,826 tons, in the trade between Great Britain and Ireland. The number cleared was 6,612, of 1,130,791 tonnage, in the general coasting trade, and that of 271,197 tons, between Great Britain and Ireland. In addition to these, 301 sailing ships, of 23,076 tons, entered the port coastwise, and 291, with 22,196 tonnage, cleared. In the same year, there were also cleared 1,034 vessels, of 10,387 tons, and 46 cleared of a tonnage of 3,145.

Total steam and sailing entered, 9,692, tonnage, 2,447,214, and cleared, 9,650, of 1,672,332 tons. The total number of vessels entered in 1909 was 11,047, with a gross tonnage of 4,594,358, and cleared 11,795, of 5,033,248 tons.

The number of vessels registered under Part I. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," as belonging to the port, December 31st, 1909, was 1,733, of 2,031,745 tons.

MUNICIPAL.

William the Lion (1165-1214) raised Glasgow to the rank of a royal burgh, with the privilege of an eight days' fair and a weekly market. In 1258 a pace was borne before a provost and bailies, and a seal was granted for the city, which was confirmed by James II. In 1587 it was granted to John Knox. In 1609 the city and barony of Glasgow was raised by James II. at the supplication of Bishop Turnbull into a regality.

The city and county, in 1895, was included within the counties of Renfrew and Lanark, but under Order No. 140 of the Boundary Commissioners appointed under the Local Government Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 50) the Renfrew portion was transferred to Lanarkshire, thus bringing the city and county within the political boundaries of Lanarkshire.

The city is governed by a Lord Provost (who is styled honourable), fourteen bailies, a treasurer, a bailie of the River and the Firth of Clyde and his depute, a master of works, two councillors, and six members elected by the electors of the city, each to hold office for one year. These members consist of the city council and the sheriff court, and are assisted by six officers, viz., the sheriff, baillies, treasurers, and those in other bodies that exercise municipal privileges—the Merchants' House and the Trades' House. The dean of guild belongs to and is nominated by the former, and the convener to the latter house, by which he is appointed. As illustrious of the numerous and varied duties that devolve upon the municipal authorities, it may be stated that the corporation administers, solely or in part, 20 distinct trusts, that the annual revenue of these is in excess of a million and a quarter, and that the debts affecting these amount to more than £7,000,000. The Corporation has also either complete management of numerous charitable establishments, with numerous charitable foundations and schools.

The police are under the direction of the Town Council, and there are nine police districts. The police of the city are under the superintendence of the chief of the city, the chief of which are the following:—The Dean of Guild Court, held every alternate Thursday, at eleven o'clock, takes cognizance of buildings and streets. The Police Court, held every Monday, at 9 o'clock. The Sheriff Small Debt Court, for debts not exceeding £20, sits every Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday. The Justice of Peace Small Debt Court, Lower Ward, holds every Thursday morning at eleven, in the County Hall, to decide claims of £5 and under. The River Bailie Court, which is also one of the Police Courts, sits from half past 10, to 4 o'clock, on the Thursday in which the jurisdiction between Glasgow Bridge and the Cloch, near the mouth of the Clyde. The Sheriff Ordinary Court sits Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, and adjudicates on causes of any amount, low or large. The Sheriff Appeal Court sits on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday at 11 o'clock.

SHIPPING.

The Clyde is naturally the great highway for mercantile traffic, and the Clyde Navigation is controlled by a body of Trustees elected by the Town Council, Chamber of Commerce, and other bodies of local interest. The Clyde Navigation comprises a number of branches, rivers, and ratarways; there is also a Pilot boat for the river and the Clyde Lighthouse trustees. The following statement gives the number and tonnage of steam vessels, and the number and tonnage of all vessels, foreign and colonial trade the total number of vessels that entered in 1909, with cargoes and in ballast, including their repeated voyages, was: Sailing, 30, tonnage 1,677,289; steam, 2,174, 715,573. Out of this number, 359, of 1,514,322, cleared for France; 134 vessels, 500,792 tons, for the United States; 116 vessels, 59,043 tonnage, for Spain; and 573, with a tonnage of 1,727,249, for E. I. I. possessions; total, Foreign and Colonial entered, 1,624, with a tonnage of 1,971,144; cleared, 1,845, of 3,160,916 tons.
GLASGOW.

There are two gais, one in Duke street, and the other at Barlinnie in the outskirts of the city. The Justiciary and Sheriff's Criminal Courts are held in a commanding vantage-ground, on the summit of the hill, from which there are fine views near the Victoria Bridge; there is a noble portico in the centre, composed of a double row of fluted columns. The two Justiciary halls are in the centre and are arranged with the requisite dignity for the court of justice.

Under the "Reform Act, 1832" (2 & 3 William IV. c. 42) Glasgow returned only two members to Parliament; but by the "Scottish Reform Act of 1858," the number was increased to three, and the city is now represented by thirty members of the House of Commons.

The city is lighted with gas from extensive works belonging to the Corporation, who have expended £806,001 on this department, as well as £1,576,317 on electric lighting. Both of these are of great value, with water of remarkable excellence, derived from Loch Katrine, in the Highlands of Perthshire, 34 miles distant. The great work by which this is accomplished, is the supply of water from the sub-structure of Mr. Bateman C.E., at a cost of over £1,500,000.

The aqueduct from the lake to the service reservoir at Mugdock, Stirlingshire, which holds 500,000,000 gallons, is made up of 15 miles of tunnels, besides 4 miles of iron piping carried across valleys. The cost of the squadron averaged £15,000 per mile. In 1886 additional works were commenced; and in May, 1886, the great basin was duplicated and a new reservoir constructed to hold 700,000,000 gallons; six water mains, each of 16 inches diameter, run from the service reservoirs to the city, giving a supply to the laying of water mains of 24 and 27 inches in diameter. The present supply amounts to 65,000,000 gallons daily. The City Improvement Trust was created in 1856, having for its object the improvement of the village and agrarian districts, taking them down, opening up new streets in densely and ill-built localities, and in a great part reconstructing the old portions of the city, a special tax being levied for the purpose. All the remaining operations. The trustees have in the course of their proceedings acquired property to the extent of nearly £4,000,000.

ECCLESIASTICAL.

The original see of Glasgow, which stood next, in point of antiquity to that of St. Andrews, is said to have been founded c. A.D. 550-56, by St. Kentigern, munificently assisted by the great Christian Bernard, the account of persecution, fled into Wales and established a monastery at St. Asaph, but in A.D. 573 returned to Glasgow, and there settled till his death. c. 601. St. Mungo was buried within the city, but no extant record of the occupants of this see begins with John, Lord Chancellor of Scotland, who was bishop from 1115. The see, of original great extent, was somewhat diminished in the formation, in 1532-3, of the see of Edinburgh; in 1485 it was raised to the dignity of an archbishopric, but the see was wholly abolished soon after the Revolution of 1688. The cathedral of St. Mungo was built and rebuilt, and occupies an elevated site on the brink of a ravine, at the foot of which once flowed a small stream called the Melandra, and as the descent of the ground eastward is mountains, a portion of the same has been designed on a plan unique, at any rate in this country, and may be described as having a double choir, the chior proper being reared upon a magnificent substructure, the east end of which was expended in 1485.

The original wooden church was destroyed by fire; but during the episcopate of Bishop John Achain (1115-47) the building of a new cathedral was begun, and continued for some centuries. Its superstructure, especially Bishop Jacobin (1175-99), and the lower church, as appears from an inscription over the doorway, was dedicated 6 July, 1197; of this Transi- onal church, nothing now remains, except the western portion of the south aisle of the lower church: it includes a Transitional shaft and vaulting of the same date, and was probably the eastern termination of the tower now standing. The circular chapel erected by Bishop William de Bondington, are elegant Early English, and were erected during the period 1235-50; but the chapter house and sacristy, though forming part of the design, were not built till much later. The nave, transepts, and the tower and spire, are Decorated, and work extending from 1260 to 1350, and the tracery therefore varying from Geometrical to Curvilinear: between 1403 and 1446 the square three-storied building at the north-east angle was built; the basement, on a level with the last, is provided with an entrance from the court of the chapter house; the first floor, similarly placed with reference to the choir, is the sacristy, and the upper floor has a gabled roof; to John Cameron, bishop 1430-45, the chapter house is attributed. At a later period Mr. Robert Blackader, the first archbishop of Glasgow (1435-40), and the last prelate who added to the fabric, erected, about 1490, the new chapter house, and, an external spire being substituted by some to be simply the undercroft for an intended extension of that transept; he also added the altars in the front of the rood screen, and altered the porches and entrance. The work done under Blackader was principally that of the chapter house, which was at one time a north-west tower, 125 feet high, erected before 1480, and surmounted by an eight-gabled spire covered with lead; corresponding to this, at the south-west angle, stood a building used from 1440 as a roundy and court house, in which the constable's office was held; both these structures, however, were removed in 1840. The cathedral, as now standing, consists of the lower church of ten bays, comprising central and side aisles; the eastern end of the north and south aisles, an eastern aisle of two bays, leading to the chapter house, and on the south side, the Blackader aisle of four bays; over the lower church is the choir of five bays, with aisles, covered with a Grecian vault; the choir is square, and the aisle or ambulatory, with a descent of four wide steps, and leading to the sacristy; the shallow transepts have two double flights of steps conducting to the lower church, the western side aisles are modern, the southern and northern, the old chapter house, and a central tower of two stages, rising 30 feet above the roof, with four-coffered parapet and dwarf pinions, and an octagonal spire, 225 feet in height, surmounted by a gabled roof. The nave is 240 feet long and 75 feet wide, the aisles 85 feet long, and with a height of 90 feet.

In 1512 a grant was made by the Crown (21 Dec.) in connection with a charter to the city, for the support of the clergy. A Charter of 1662 of King Charles II. Law made substantial repairs to the roofing; in 1641 (7 Nov.) another Crown grant, similar to the preceding, was made, and there had also been for about a century a nominal grant of one shilling a year for one priest. But the preferential charges on this grant rendered it practically valueless; after the Revolution of 1688 and the establishment of Presbyterianism, the interior was divided into the chapter-house, being the sub-basilica, the choir, and the choir, the latter being occupied as the Inner Church and the nave as the Outer Church, the lower church being assigned to Barony parish. In the years 1800-4 the lower church was converted into a ballroom. By the act of 1825, the other clergy, and the direction of Mr. Stark, architect; galleries were then erected round three sides of the choir, which was also restored, and a high pew for distinguished persons set apart in the west end. The cloisters were used as a place of worship by the Barony parish, was converted into a burial place, filled with banked-up earth, the windows blocked, and the magnificent vaulting painted black; for the carrying out of this work, no less than £500 were expended. The whole, however, of £400 appears to have been made by the Treasury. In 1824 the Government employed Mr. Reid, architect, to make a survey of the cathedral, and on his recommendation a sum of £15,000 was voted, to be applied to the repair of the whole of the internal masonry including the vaulting, being repaired or renewed; and in 1835 the lower church was cleared of the mould accumulated in it and the windows renewed. A grant of £6,000 was made in 1840; during the period 1840-50, and subsequently, the Corporation, with the co-operation of the Treasury, and the Commissioners of Woods and Forests, undertook a systematic survey of the building, and engaged Mr. Edward Flore D.C.L., F.R.S., F.S.A. architect, at a cost of over £15,000, in the course of which the nave roof was renewed in plaster in a semi-hexagonal arch, and the whole of the choir and chapter house, including the whole of the roofs, were repaired and heightened. The gallery above the triforium was removed, and the cathedral was reopened for public worship at the close of March, 1850. In the present year (1911) the cathedral is being entirely re- roofed. An added feature is the provision of the cloisters, including those of the lower church, and excepting only the clerestories, have been filled with stained glass, almost entirely of the Munich School; the west window was executed at Munich in 1859, and those in the nave generally represent Old Testament subjects, the choir windows, however, being of the classical school. Our Lord; the cost of the glass in the four lancets in the eastern gable was defrayed by Parliamentary grant; the galleries erected at the beginning of the 19th century but not in their present form, were placed; they are on the site of the ancient high altar, and the space around it paved with marble. The lower church, commonly, but incorrectly, styled the crypt, is square, and the western part of it is recessed by an arched entrance, approached by five steps and flanked by acutely pointed arches, all having slender shafts and canted spurs, and there is a similar porch on the north side. Of the present 20 ft. 300 feet, the main portion, or about 90 feet of its length from the west end, being divided into two aisles by arcades of nine arches on alternately large and small point-headed pointed arcades, the central part of the nave forming the main area of the choir above, and the constantly varying plan and design of the piers and their capitals, the endless change in effect produced by their grouping, as well as the infinite varieties of the capitals, the elaborate character of the groining in the vaulting alone, is wonderful to a degree, and is indeed the great glory of the church; nearly in the centre, and raised on a small risalit, the ancient chantry chapel of the lady Lesley, considered by some authorities as intended for Bishop Jocelyn; the general height of the lower church is about 100 ft. above the eastern ambulatory, to which there is a descent of eight, or about 30 ft. at each end; this portion of the lower church forms, from north to south, a double aisle of four bays, and the three bays at each end are filled in by solid walls forming chapels; the central wall is pierced by an arch, under which lies the effigy of Bishop Robert Wishart, who was here buried c. 1315; and the side-chapels are filled by trefoliated-headed openings, with piscine and credence niches, &c. St. Mungo's, now, inside the building, and also another altar; on the east side of the chapter house is a communion table, for the dean, with an inscription above it. Architect Blackader's work is in the south aisle. The steps from the transept, is similarly divided into two aisles by clustered piers, with foliated caps; the vaulting is profusely groined and adorned with rich carved and painted bosses, sometimes also called the “lady chapel,” contains, at the south-east angle, a solitary monument, to Archbishop Lord (1515-33); the space around the communion table is encircled, and has a reredos at the east end, stalls on either side, and a pulpit at the north-west corner; the rest of the choir is filled with pews and benches, and across the west end is a gallery, supported on coupled columns; the eastern end of this portion of the church, the ancient rood screen, an elaborate structure 30 feet in breadth, on the west side, and 10 ft. in thickness, with interior stairs; the entrance, reached by a flight of five steps, in the north aisle, is through the north wall, and the space on either side is relieved by arched penult: a boldly projecting moulded cornice surrounds the whole and carries seven pairs of grotesque figures, serving as corbels to support as many crocketed buttresses, the pinnacles dividing the beautiful open tierceron parapet; on either side the whole stands an altar with arcaded front, and flanking these are the descent to the lower church, which is said to have been erected at the Reformation, but renewed about 1830. In the north transept is a monument to Dr. Chrystal (1390), and in the south transept another to Sir James Watson, Knight; projecting in the nave is the ancient table of the Canons, 1727, Lieut. John Sirling, 1829, and the Hon. Henry Cadogan, Kent, col. 71st Regiment, slain at Vitoria, 21st June, 1813; and outside the south aisle is a statue of Dr. Frank Alexander. The roof in the nave is the only brass now extant in Scotland; it is 6 feet long by 3 feet 2 in. wide, and commemorates six knights of the house of Minto, the date being 1608; at the base is a painted oval, 1ft. 8in. square, and the inscription, 1641, partially blocking the window against which it is placed; the south-west porch, next this tomb, is constructed between two of the canopied buttresses and has a small recessed archway, on each side of the splay, is an entrance, with carved work in the tympanum; the west doorway, 17 by 17 ft., is considerably earlier than the rest of the nave, and consists of a double portal of six quadra-and six semi-circular orders, with a square head to each entrance, the space above being filled with niches; the great west window, once built up, was repaired and refurnished with new stone work in 1824, from a design by Mr. David Hamilton, and displays a fine traceried roundel in the head; the western gable, as well as the aisles, is flanked by strong buttresses rising into richly crocketed pinnacles, all these having been rebuilt and extended on the original foundation, in 1846, of the north-west tower and consistory house.

In addition to the Cathedral there are nine churches known as the City churches, which belong to the Corporation, of which the two most celebrated are Blackfriars, The Tran, St. Andrew's, St. David's, St. Enoch's, St. George's, St. James's, St. John's, and St. Paul's, all with districts formed out of the original tenements; St. Andrew's, the old parish church, destroyed by fire in 1827, was built in place of the Old College or Blackfriars Church, High street, erected in 1669, on the site of the ancient monastic Church of the Black Friars, which was founded by the last Prior of 1312, was placed; the College Church belonged partly to the University, and the professors and students assembled within it for worship until 1837, when the site was acquired by the Duke of Sutherland and the S.W. Railways; the College was removed to Gilmore hill in 1870, and the College Church east to Westerghedie in 1876, when the old name of "Blackfriars" was assumed. The Tran, or Leigh Church, is the old church of the 16th century; the nave of the elder church, erected in 1484, is a plain building of stone, surmounted by a cupola; the tower, of four storeys, projects from its centre, is surmounted by a parapet, and there were carried on lofty open arches; it has an open parapet with pinnacles and an octagonal spire with dormer lights, built in 1657, and contains a clock and two bells. The new Tran Church was placed; the church from a part of its steeple having been used as a weigh house. St. Andrew's Church, in the square, of the same name, was completed in 1756, at an expense of £15,000, and was designed by Mr. James Colquhoun, architect. St. Enoch Church, in St. Enoch square, was originally erected in 1790, from designs by Mr. Jaffrey, but the existing structure, with the exception of a fine western front, contains, in the south aisle, a square, with columns of the Doric order. The steeple, 160 ft. in height, is crowned with a dome and six obelisk-shaped pinnacles. St. John's Church, in Greyman street, was built during the residence here of Dr. Chalmers (c. 1814-16), and has an organ gallery 120 ft. long, all of teinds. Dr. Paul's Church, built in 1834 by the Town Council in 1835, at a cost of £3,000, to take the place of the outer church, up to that time held in the nave of the Cathedral. St. David's Church, on the north-west side, is commenced, in the Gothic style, from the designs of Messrs. Rickman & Hutchinson, architects, of Birmingham, and includes a tower 200 ft. high, and a spacious vaulted crypt beneath. The cost of the church was £5,000, but the sepulchre in the crypt sold for £4,000. Apart from the city churches there are many churches in the city connected with the Establishment which are self-supporting. The extensive Barony parish church, as its name implies, is placed; it was built during the time of the Reformation, until in 1792 a separate church was built contiguous to the Cathedral, from a design by Mr. Adam; from 1801 to 1825 the church was built, and has since been restored as a burial ground by sinking a pit of it earth, and blocking the windows; but in 1850 the church was rebuilt, and numerous ecclesiastical parishes have been formed out of the old Church of Gorbals, in Carlton place, between the Jamieson street and Stockwell street bridges, was erected or completed in 1810, from designs by Mr. David Hamilton, archited, it has a tower 120 ft. high, with a rusticated basement, and columns of the Doric order in the centre, and projecting therefrom is a tower supported on columns, and corresponding pilasters at the angles, each term coloured with yellow, and the height; the sides of the building are finished with an entablature and balustrading; the principal windows being ornamented with trussed pilasters and a frieze and cornice. This church was for many years rented to a Free Church Congregation, but it again reverted to the Establishment, about 1860, and the patronage of the living is with heritors and farmers by purchase. Gorbals Parish at one time formed part of the Parish of Govan, but was dia-

[SLATER'S]

Joined in the year 1771. It was combined with Gowan for poor; it is now a member of the Roman Catholic body. The Catholic body is represented by the Archdiocese of Glasgow, founded in 1492, but vacant between the years 1603 and 1787; it comprises the counties of Lanark, Dumfries, Renfrew, part of Ayr, part of Stirlingshire, and the Cumbrae isles.

For full list of all places of worship, see St. George's.

Cemeteries.—The Necropolis, situated immediately east of the Cathedral, was formed in 1829-30, and is approached by a lofty bridge, crossing the valley through which runs the Clyde, called the “Bridge of Sighs.” The grounds are beautified by shrubberies, trees, flowers, and gravel walks, and thickly adorned with monumental columns, statues, and other memorials. The other cemeteries in the city, and in the adjoining parishes, are the Crematorium, in Caledonia road; the Eastern Necropolis, in Great Eastern road; Cathcart Cemetery; New Cathcart Cemetery, three miles south of Glasgow; Ormiston Cemetery, in Paisley road; Lenzie Cemetery; Kirkintilloch Cemetery; Partick more road, Maryhill; Sandymount, Shettleston and Sighthill Cemetery, Springfield Road. The Glasgow Crematorium and Chapel, within the Western Necropolis, are the last substantial remains of the Necropolis, and an undertaking of Burial Reform and Cremation Society Limited, at a cost of about £2,000, from plans by Mr. James Chalmers I.A., architect, and formally opened Nov. 26, 1895. The exterior of the building is of stone, the main entrance a grand edifice with columns of the Ionic order, 32 feet high. The upper storeys are relieved with emblematic figures representing Music, Painting, Science, and Architecture; there are also inscriptions recording the names of the chief benefactors. The Crematorium is a spacious building, in which public meetings are held.

The City Hall, in Albion street, are made for all kinds of public gatherings; the grand ball will hold about 1,000 persons, the salon ball, 400; the mid hall, the upper hall, and the lesser hall, each 350. St. Andrew's Public Hall, in Granville street west, are, in the Classic style, with a frontage of 200 feet, and 49 feet high; it has three lancet windows. The chamber, slightly elevated, has two richly-moulded windows in the gable. The exterior is fitted with seats and a stone pulpit. Below the level of the main hall, there is a basement, in which in rear of it are two incinerating chambers. The offices of the society are at 124 St. Vincent street, Glasgow.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

The Municipal Buildings, in George square, the foundation stone of which was laid October 6th, 1883, by the Lord Provost, were opened by Her Late Majesty Queen Victoria, in Aug. 1886, and form an extensive quadrangle of three stories. The Hall, the main or western front of which, facing the square, is 246 feet in length, and has 13 columns, the town clerk's department occupying the ground and first floors, extending from the entrance front to the square. The U-shaped building, on the north side of George square, is 372 feet in length, and has 17 columns. The Hall, the main front, is 133 feet in length, 64 feet wide, and has 5 columns. In George square, are the City Chambers, and Exchange, and Bank of Scotland, and at the south-east corner of George square, is the Bank of Scotland, all in the Classic style, with a stately façade, and a portico of the Ionic order. The County Buildings, on the south side of George square, is an edifice four stories, 372 feet in length, 90 feet wide, and has 5 columns. The Hall, the main front, is 133 feet in length, 64 feet wide, and has 5 columns. The City Library, also in the Classic style, and comprises the Hall, the main front, and the small hall, the upper hall, and the lower hall, each 350.

The rooms on the north side of George square have been fitted up for gas and water departments. Facing Cockburn street, and entering from the south-east corner of the quadrangle, is the public works office, and the office of the Clerk of the Works, in George square; and the General Post Office, 200 feet in length, 100 feet wide, and 5 stories high. Cockburn street, form a group of buildings in the Classic style, with a stately façade, and a portico of the Ionic order. They consist of court hall and offices for the sheriff, sheriff-substitute, and sheriff-custodian; the court hall and offices for the Clerk of the Works, and the City Engineer; the building on the south side of George square is an edifice four stories, in height, in the Italian style, and was enlarged during the period 1850-5. The central block, building, is 4 stories high, and has 5 columns. The existing structure; the new portion forms a block of three floors, with a space of 120 feet by 77 feet on each, and has a frontage to Ingram street. In the basement is the market hall, and in the upper storey the Exchange.

On the ground floor provision is made for additional sitting accommodation, and there is a new letter-carriers' sorting department on the first floor. On the top floor is the court hall, the main front, 133 feet in length, 64 feet wide, and 5 stories high. An extension of the system of transmitting telegrams by pneumatic tube has also been brought into use, the establishments at present served in this way being the Royal Exchange, Royal Bank of Scotland, and the Waterloo street office (two tubes), and tubes have also been laid to the Fishmarket and St. Enoch square. The Royal Exchange, in The Square, is a fine structure in the Classic style, with a portico and a broad staircase. The hall, 133 feet long, 45 feet wide, and 4 stories high. A dome, carried on twelve Corinthian pillars, surmounts the building. The great room is supplied with all the leading newspapers, directories, commercial lists &c., besides the latest home and foreign telegrams. The numerous apartments above and below the Exchange are appropriated to various commercial purposes. The Stock Exchange, in Buchanan street and St. George's place, opened in 1877, at a cost of over £50,000, and extended in 1906, is in the early French-Gothic style, from designs by the hands of Mr. Burnet and his son, Dr. Burnet. The Corn Exchange, in Hope street, is a modern structure, and the interior is conveniently fitted up. The market is held every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. The Bank of Scotland, in West George street, erected in 1874-7, has a tower 122 feet high, and a frontage varying from 96 to 98 feet. The Chamber of Commerce occupies a portion of the building. The Hall, the main front, is 133 feet high, with a centre and wings, with a rustic basement, four Doric columns above support the entablature, and a dome, surmounted by a lantern, rises from the roof. The Theatre Royal is a spacious building, in which public meetings are commonly held. The City Hall, in Albion street, are used for all kinds of public gatherings; the grand ball will hold about 1,000 persons, the salon ball, 400; the mid hall, the upper hall, and the lesser hall, each 350. St. Andrew's Public Hall, in Granville street west, are, in the Classic style, with a frontage of 200 feet, and 49 feet high; it has three lancet windows. The chamber, slightly elevated, has two richly-moulded windows in the gable. The interior is fitted with seats and a stone pulpit. Below the level of the main hall, there is a basement, in which in rear of it are two incinerating chambers. The offices of the society are at 124 St. Vincent street, Glasgow.

BANKS.

The Bank of Scotland, erected in 1869, is a building in the Italian style, and has over its St. Vincent place entrance a ponderous entablature resting on carvings, from the chisel of Mr. William Mossman. The Union Bank of Scotland Limited, in Ingram street, is also in the Italian style, from designs by Mr. Burnet, of Glasgow, architect, and has a frontage of 106 feet; it was erected at a cost of over £250,000, and is largely faced with polished Aberdeen granite. Surmounting the main entrance is a massive open pediment embellished with carved work, in the centre of which is a raised sculptured niche, and the names of the Bank are engraved on the notes issued by this bank. The Clydebank Bank Limited, on the north side of St. Vincent place, was erected in 1875, and is in the Classic style, after the designs of Mr. John Burnet, architect. The Bank of Scotland has 127 offices, with a frontage of 154 feet. On the south side of St. Vincent place, are the offices of the Scottish Amicable Life Assurance Society, erected in 1873-9, from the designs of Messrs. Campbell, Douglas & Sellers.

LITERARY, SCIENTIFIC AND PROFESSIONAL.

The Glasgow Athenæum, St. George's place, was instituted in 1847. The present buildings, opened in 1885, are well adapted for the purposes to which they are devoted. The Athenæum combines the advantages of an exchange and the comforts of a club, with extensive educational departments. The reading rooms are abundantly supplied with the earlier works of the principal authors, and with periodicals of every kind, and the library contains upwards of 25,000 volumes. The Mitchell Library, North street (Anderson), founded on a bequest from the Misses Mitchell, April 17, 1874, is a Free Public Reference Library, and was opened Nov. 1877; it now (1911) contains 180,000 volumes in all departments of literature. The library, so full of valuable works, is profusely equipped with many special subjects. In particular the library contains many works on artistic design and decoration as applied to manufactures, and special collections have been formed of books relating to Scotland, and particularly to Glasgow and the West. The “Poets' Corner” is believed to contain the largest and most valuable library of Burns and Scottish poets and dramatists in existence. The “Moir Collection” now contains over 23,000 volumes, bequeathed by the late Bailie Moir, or purchased with money left by him for that purpose. Under a bequest of the late Councillor Logan, the town council continued the magazine, the Presbyterian Transactions of the Royal Society, and many other works of importance. In the magazine room may be seen the current numbers of 200 selected journals and periodicals, and subscriptions are provided for students and for ladies. The library is open from 9.30 a.m. till 10 p.m. daily, and is managed by a committee of the Town Council. The Glasgow Art Institute of Fine Arts holds annual exhibitions, opening early in February, in the large suite of galleries at 270 Sauchiehall street, opened Feb. 3rd, 1850; Percy Bate, acting sec. Glasgow Library was erected in 1792-4, by a bequest of the merchant in Glasgow, and enhanced by subsequent benefactions, now incorporates the Glasgow Public Library, and has there been added to it the valuable collection belonging to the late Bailie Moir, which was bequeathed to the city at his death. The library contains many fine specimens of early printing and several manuscripts, as well as a complete set of the publications of the Patent Office. The Glasgow Art Gallery and Museum, in Kelvin Grove, erected in 1901, at a cost of nearly £250,000, is an edifice of red brick with stone facings, from designs by Messrs. J. W. Simpson and Milner Allen, architects, of London, and includes a large hall for holding exhibitions and exhibitions of natural history, geology, engineering, antiquities, and a museum; the collections consist of pictures and objects of art, and comprises a library. The Glasgow Library, 152 West Regent street, owes its existence to George Baillie, a member of the Faculty of Procuators in Glasgow, and was founded in 1803, and opened in 1807; and contains about 250,000 volumes; it is open daily, Sundays excepted, from a.m. till 10 p.m. to all persons over 14 years of age.

Glasgow Corporation Public Libraries.—Under the provisions of the Glasgow Corporation (Tramways, Libraries &c.) Act of 1895, the Corporation has been enabled to acquire additional libraries and three reading rooms. Libraries have been erected and opened in Gorbals, Kingston, Anderson, Woodside, Maryhill, Kinning Park, Dennistoun, Govanhill, and Possil, and the building of the library at Maryhill, and of the library at Govanhill, the Townhead and Pollokshields, and one reading room, under a bequest of the late Mr. John Rankin, in Whitevale street. The libraries are under the management of the Town Council; counsellor, Councillor Baillie McLean; sub-convenor, Councillor Samuel Hoby; city librarian, F. T. Barrett.

The New Club, in West George street, has a frontage of 84 feet, and is provided with every convenience for the comfort of its members. The Faculty of Physicians' and Surgeons' Hall is in St. Vincent street, the meeting room of the Faculty being a handsome chamber, the walls of which are hung with the portraits of past presidents of the Faculty. The examination in examination work is now associated with the Royal Colleges of Physicians and Surgeons of Edinburgh, examinations being held in Glasgow in April and July. The Faculty is in the habit of granting a number of scholarships, and grants in respect of the subjects of Medicine, Dental Surgery, Pathology, Physiography, and anertenology, and grants separately a Fellowship and a qualification in dental surgery. The Faculty also furnishes accommodation for those who reside in Edinburgh, and enables hospitals to the extent of £40,000, stands in grounds adjoining those of the University on the west. A dispensary, pathological buildings and a nurses' home were added in 1905 at a cost of about £40,000. The infirmary shares in the appointment of the Professor of Pathology.

The Eye Infirmary is at 173 Berkeley street, and 80 Charlotte street. The Glasgow Hospital and Dispensary for Diseases of the Ear, Nose and Throat is a large building, and has for its objects: to afford to the poor suffering from ear disease the best possible treatment; to provide facilities to medical students and practitioners for the study of otology, and to develop and advance the science and art of auricular surgery.

The Garscube Cottage Hospital, in Coppins road, Maryhill, was erected in 1875, as a memorial to the late Sir George Campbell bart. of Succoth, who died 17th Feb. 1874, and contains 8 beds.

The Lock Hospital, in Rotten row, was established in 1803.

Stobhill General Hospital and Infirmary, which is under the control of the Glasgow Parish Council, was opened 15 Sept. 1904, and contains 1,753 beds for adults, children and non-infectious cases. It stands on a gentle declivity facing the village of Auchinairn, about 3 miles from the city, and is built in detached blocks of red brick with freestone dressings; extensive grounds surround the buildings.

Hutcheson's Hospital, in Ingram street, was founded by two brothers, George and Thomas Hutchison, between the years 1659 and 1641. The former amassed a large fortune as a writer and notary, the latter was a preacher. The present building, erected in 1803, includes the octagon, which is about 100 feet in diameter. From the original endowment and subsequent benefactions, the trustees now appropriate a sum of about £12,000 per annum for the payment of pensions to aged women in the hospital, and 1,000,000 for the purchase of the premises now occupied, and 3,000 for the maintenance of the hospital, which amounts to about £8,000 per annum, is paid over to the governors of the Hutchison Educational Trust to be applied to educational purposes in the terms of the scheme constituting that trust.

The Royal Glasgow Asylum for the Blind, at 100 Castle street, founded in 1804, has for its object the education, maintenance and employment of the blind, and there are at present (1913) 300 workers and inmates engaged in the manufacture of socks, mats, rugs, twine and hemp, and machine beds, &c. Nearly £50 per week is disbursed to the blind in the form of wages actually earned, and, where necessary, special grants are made from the charitable funds of the institution.

The Deaf and Dumb Institute is at Prospecthill road, Mount Florida.

The Eastern District Fever Hospital, in Duke street, begun about 1893, is now completed.

The Western District Hospital is in Possil road.

The Magdalen Asylum, at Lochburn, Maryhill, will hold 220 inmates. There is a probationary Home at 268 Cathedral street, for 50 inmates.

The Mosbank Industrial School, at Hogfaden, four miles to the west of town, is conducted on the education of neglected and destitute boys. The foundation stone was laid 26 Aug. 1868, by the 15th Earl of Dalhousie K.T., Grand Master Mason of Scotland, assisted by the 19th Earl of Dalhousie and other officials of the Grand Lodge of Scotland. Externally the building is of red brick with bands and ornamental work in white and black brick, and is available for 375 boys.

The Dog and Cat Home for Glasgow and the West of Scotland is in a large building in Hardgate, and has an office at 29 Bath street. Its objects are the taking care of stray dogs, and so far as its limits permit, of stray cats, and the boarding and treatment of dogs and cats. The Home is conducted by the connection of the art and science of architecture, and the consideration and discussion of all subjects and questions connected directly or indirectly with that profession. There are now about 300 members.

CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

The Royal Infirmary, situate near the Cathedral and originally built in 1792-4, is now (1913) being replaced by a new building on the same site; temporary wards have been added to the old buildings during the building operations. When completed, the new infirmary will hold about 650 patients. The Western Infirmary, opened in October, 1874, at a cost of about £100,000, stands in grounds adjoining those of the University on the west. A dispensary, pathological buildings and a nurses' home were added in 1905 at a cost of about £40,000. The infirmary shares in the appointment of the Professor of Pathology.

RELIGIOUS AND MORAL SOCIETIES.

The Tract and Colportage Society of Scotland, 158 St. Vincent street, is intended to promote the diffusion of a healthy religious literature among the different classes of the population. The Sunday School Union, also maintained by them, is supported by the subscriptions of a large number among the subscribers, and the profits of which are distributed among them by way of bounties.

Wellington Street, the private residence of Sir Robert Hope, is the scene of a healthful religious society of a high order, and in the extent of the foundation and the number of its members, it ranks as one of the most important of its kind in Scotland.

The Langside School, situated in the city of Glasgow, is a public institution for the education of the field class, and is maintained by the subscriptions of the parents and friends of the children. The school is conducted in a most efficient manner, and a large number of children are benefited by its services.

The Glasgow Christian Institute, published about 1870, occupies buildings in Bothwell street, erected in 1855-6, and five stores in height, in a species of Romanesque style; on either side are premises occupied by the Young Men's Christian Association Club, and the Bible Training Institute, both erected about 1857. There are several Bible Societies and Sabbath School Societies, besides the Young Men's Christian Association, in connection with which a course of lectures is delivered every evening, at which the students and the public are admitted.

The Girls' Home, in Rottenrow, is used as an auxiliary to the Home at Maryhill.

PLACES OF AMUSEMENT, PARKS AND GARDENS.

The Theatre Royal is in Hope street, the Grand Theatre is in Cowcaddens street, the Royalty Theatre is in Sauchiehall street, the Royal Princess's Theatre in Main street, Gorbals, and the Metropolis Theatre in Stockwell street, all of which are erected by Messrs. L. and T. and Alexander Wood, who, in 1854, suffered for their adherence to Protestantism; this latter monument has been removed three times, and as now standing was erected in 1858. A large equestrian statue to William III. presented to the city in 1736 by James M'Crea esq. then governor of Madras, and a native of Glasgow.

The monument to Lord Nelson, on Glasgow Green, is a simple obelisk, 143 feet in height, surrounded by a protecting railing; the four sides of the pedestal bear inscriptions, recording the dates of his birth and death, and a list of his naval achievements. The fine bronze equestrian statue of the Duke of Wellington, which stands in front of the Royal Exchange, was modelled by the late Baron Marochetti, and erected in 1844, at a cost of $10,000.

There are more than a score of equestrian statues of illustrious Scottish reformers, including John Knox, erected here in 1825; the figure was modelled by Mr. Nisbet, of Dunbarton, from a painting in Glasgow University, and the pedestal inscriptions, which have been adapted and improved, are in the statue of McGavin, the formidable opponent of Popery, and author of "The Protestant." There are other monuments to James Wilson, a weaver, Hardie, a fisherman, and to J. A. Thomson, a publisher, both of whom fought against the Popish plot.

The Burns monument, erected by public subscription, was inaugurated on the anniversary of the poet's birthday and consists of a bronze statue, 9 feet in height, set on a pedestal of grey granite, the surface of which are filled with bas-reliefs also in bronze, contributed by towns in the west of Scotland, and containing illustrations of Burns' works. Three other monuments have a position in George square, viz. those to the poet, Sir Walter Scott, and James Oswald, first member of Parliament for Glasgow after the passing of the Reform Bill of 1832. Sir John Moore K.C.B., who fell at Corunna 16 Jan. 1809, in the hour of victory over a much superior French force, was a native of Glasgow, where he was born 15 Nov. 1761. James Watt F.R.S. the eminent mechanic and engineer, was for some time a working mechanic in Glasgow, and in 1763 withdrew to a private room near the Broomielaw, during which seclusion, with a single assistant, he commenced the experiments that issued in such momentous results. Henry Bell, of Helensburgh, also an ingenious and successful inventor in the department of steam locomotion, launched on the Clyde in 1812 a small steamboat of 25 tons, called the "Comet," the first steamboat which plied on any water, and which proved its inability to resist the impetuosity of wind and tide, reeling a speed of 7 miles an hour.

MONUMENTS.

At the back of the Cathedral is a rocky eminence called the Merchants' Park, upon the summit of which, on a cost of $15,000, in 1855, a statue of the illustrious Scottish reformer, John Knox, erected here in 1825; the figure was modelled by Mr. Forrest, of Lanark, from a painting in Glasgow University, and the pedestal inscriptions, which have been adapted and improved, are in the...
GLASGOW UNIVERSITY

The University of Glasgow was founded by Pope Nicholas V, on the application of William Turnbull, Roman Catholic Bishop of Galloway, in 1453. It is the oldest university in Scotland, and the second oldest among the universities of Scotland, St. Andrews alone having priority. It was established under the name then given to such institutions—studium generale—by a charter of King James IV. The seats of study included theology, philosophy, and civil law, the arts, and every other lawful faculty. At first there were not any buildings or endowments, but students soon began to assemble for lectures in a building near the Mercat Cross, in a street called Boton row. In 1460 Sir James Hamilton, 1st baron Hamilton, made a gift to the University of a tenement and four acres of land on the north side of Blackfriars church, comprising a situation for the use of study including theological courses, and the right to exercise other powers in the government of the University. Under the “Universities Act of 1829,” the members of the University Court were increased to thirty-three, of whom nine were nominated by the Provost of Glasgow for the time being, an assessor nominated by the Chancellor, an assessor nominated by the Rector, an assessor nominated by the Lord Provost, and nine members of the University Court, four assessors elected by the General Council, and four elected by the Senators Academicians. The Court is now a body corporate, in which is vested all the property belonging to the University. The revenues derived from these powers were also conferred upon it by the Act of 1839, including the administration of revenue and property; the reviewing of decisions by the Senators; the appointment of Professors to certain chairs, and of Examiners for degrees; the recognition of extra-mural lecturers; the election of a representative of the University on the General Medical Council, besides many other functions.

The University buildings, situated on Gilmourhill, an eminence at the west end of Glasgow, occupy a site of nearly 4 acres, overlooking the Kelvingrove Park and the River Kelvin. The University was founded in 1453, and on the 8th October of the following year the foundation stone was laid by His late Majesty King Edward VII. then Prince of Wales. The buildings form an oblong quadrangle, about 120 feet in length, 100 feet in breadth, and 30 feet wide, enclosing two quadrangles, divided by a central block, running transversely. The whole was erected from designs by Sir G. Gilbert Scott k.t. R.A. and is in the Gothic style of the 12th century, modified by the introduction of Scottish features and detail. The south or principal front is dominated by a lofty central tower, with ornamental parapets and projecting turrets, and surmounted by an octagonal spire of open stonework, reaching a height of about 350 feet; each end of this front is raised and forms the roof of the Medical School, which comprises the Anatomy and Science Class-rooms, and projecting from these are buildings forming the Chemical and Anatomical Laboratories. Connecting the north and south portions of the University buildings in which women were admitted late in the 19th century, by the Marquis of Bute, established by a number of memorial stained glass windows. The northern section of the pile, besides the Library, founded prior to the Reformation, and containing upwards of 150,000 volumes, comprises a Students’ Reading Room, and the famous Hunterian Museum. This museum was bequeathed to the College by the celebrated Dr. Hunter, of London, a native of East Kilbride, and was transferred to Glasgow in 1809.

The collection contains specimens of natural history, anatomical preparations, paintings, books, and medals, the latter being estimated at £20,000, and the whole collection costs Dr. Hunter £100,000. The pictures are all from the pencils of the great masters, including Titian, Guido, Domenichino, Rubens and Rembrandt.

Additional to the collection are continually being made. Among these is the magnificent watercolour collection extended at a cost of £70,000, and further extensions were completed at an estimated additional cost of about £100,000, and opened by T.M. King George V. and Queen Mary, then Prince and Princess of Wales, 23rd April, 1907.

Queen Margaret College, Hamilton drive, Hillhead, forms the department for women students of the University, and was established as such in session 1892-3, the first session in which women were admitted late in the 19th century, by the Marquis of Bute, established by a number of memorial stained glass windows. over £45,000, and the endowment funds, amounting to £63,957 7s. 11d., were handed over to the University Court; but the name "Queen Mary's College" survives as designating the part of the University buildings and grounds which is devoted to the education of women. The classes held here now prepare for the various degrees of the University, the teaching and other matters are regulated by the University Court and Senate, and the teaching staff is appointed by the Court. The curricula, regulations, and fees are those of the University, and the college students have access to the University library and museum. The medical students have also facilities for clinical work in the Royal Infirmary (where beds are reserved for clinical instruction for women students only), the Royal Hospital for Sick Children, and Glasgow Maternity Hospital; and for dispensary work in the Royal Infirmary, Royal Sick Children's Hospital and Central Dispensary.

GLASGOW.

GOVAN is a police burgh town, post town, on the south bank of the Clyde, about 3 miles west of Glasgow, and has a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and on the Glasgow and Paisley joint railway. It gives its name to one of the Parliamentary divisions of Great Britain, and consists of near 1,006 acres. Glasgow, having been a continuous line of houses connecting the two. The burgh is governed by a provost and 18 commissioners. It has little to interest beyond its extensive shipbuilding yards, which for the construction of iron vessels have earned a world-wide reputation. The whole parish is now entirely in Lanarkshire, as, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," to 52 & 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 55, Boundary Order 140, the adoption of the name of Govan parish formerly in Renfrewshire has been transferred to Lanarkshire, and most of it incorporated with the extended city of Glasgow. The parish church, picturesquely situated near the river, was re-built in 1884. The Episcopal Church of St. Michael, built in 1875, will seat 600 persons; the rectory, net yearly value £253, has been held since 1903 by the Rev. W. Richmond, of the University of London. A town hall at Merryflatts was erected by the Govan Parochial Board. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. Elder Park, presented to the inhabitants of Govan by Mrs. Elder, was opened in August, 1885, by the Earl of Rosebery K.G., K.T. and contains a statue of the late John Elder esq. created in 1884, at a cost of £2,000, and also one of the late Mrs. Elder, erected in 1896; near the Govan road there now stands a statue of the late Sir William Pearce, d. 12th Dec. 1888. The Free Library was erected in 1903 at a cost of £7,000, defrayed by the late Mrs. Elder. The church contains an area of 1,319 acres; rateable value in 1909-10, £248,588; population in 1891, 62,311; in 1901, 84,970, and in 1909 was 90,521. The area of the parish (Govan Combination) is 6,716 acres; the population in 1891 was 284,225, and in 1901, 341,450, viz.—Glasgow burgh, 189,470; Govan police burgh, 84,070; Govan town (beyond police burgh), 5,842; Kinning park police burgh, 13,842; Partick police burgh, 57,479. The total area of the parish, with the buildings of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 80,435.

The population of the wards in 1901 was:—first, 11,528; second, 15,398; third, 9,982; fourth, 9,122; fifth, 16,009; sixth, 11,157; total, 76,530.

In 1910 the population of the wards was:—first, 16,548; second, 17,306; third, 9,216; fourth, 10,702; fifth, 17,261; sixth, 12,532; total, 83,568.

Cardonald is a quoad sacra parish in Govan and Paisley (Renfrewshire) civil parishes; the population in 1901 was 2,043.

PARTICK is a town and police burgh in Lanarkshire, on the north bank of the Clyde, and west of the city of Glasgow, and in the civil parish of Govan, opposite Govan burgh. It has a station on the North British railway, and is environs by agreeable scenery and possesses a beautiful park. There are also mills, factories, boat-building yards, and other industrial establishments. The burgh is governed by a provost, 6 magistrates and 11 commissioners. There are branches here of the National Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited. The area of the burgh is 1,006 acres; rateable value in 1910, £38,243. The population has increased with extraordinary rapidity. In 1851 it was 1,017, in 17,593; in 1881, 27,306; in 1891, 55,558, and in 1901, 54,747 in the burgh, and in 1910 (estimated), 67,260, and 14,923 in the ecclesiastical parish.

The population of the wards in 1901 was:—first, 8,879; second, 10,652; third, 10,534; fourth, 13,534; fifth, 10,900; total, 54,261. In 1910 the population of the wards was:—first, 10,371; second, 11,069; third, 10,678; fourth, 15,923; fifth, 9,357; sixth, 9,362; total, 67,260.

KENNETH PARK, or KENNEH PARK, is a police burgh on the south bank of the Clyde, about 1 mile south-west of Glasgow, is a quoad sacra parish, and was created a police burgh 16th January, 1871, and under Order No. 140 of the Boundary Commissioners was transferred from Renfrewshire to Lanarkshire. The burgh is now within the city of Glasgow. The area rateable value and population are now included in those of the city.

The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 16,516.

RUTHERGLEN, or RUGLEN, as it is commonly called, is a town and ancient royal burgh, and police burgh and parish in Lanarkshire, with a station on the Caledonian railway, and is 23 miles south-east from Glasgow and 9 miles west of Glasgow and Renfrew. It forms the Kilmarnock parliamentary district, returning one member. This place once gave the title of earl to the Hamilton family, and subsequently, by a marriage, to that of Douglas, but it is now extinct on the death of William (Douglas) 3rd Earl of Ruglen and Earl of March, in 1810. The parish church, with the exception of the tower, was built in 1794; the tower, now standing detached, is a plain square structure, with a sort of broach spire, relieved by dormers. In the old church of Rutherfurd Sir John Montefith, in 1901, engaged to betray to the English his friend and companion, Sir William Wallace. The Town Hall, in Main street, erected in 1861, at a cost of nearly £2,797, is a structure of considerable beauty, with a spire and clock tower, containing a clock with four dials. In 1876 municipal and other buildings were added at a cost of £17,000. The town has a good circulating library. It is a member of the Commercial Board of Scotland Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. The fair here have been noted for a great show of horses, particularly of the Lanarkshire or Clydesdale breed, esteemed the best for draught in Scotland; they are held on the first Friday after the 4th of May; first Tuesday after the 4th of June; first Friday after 25th of July; first Friday after the 25th of November; Wednesday and Friday in the first week of November, and the Friday after the 25th of November. The castle of Rutherfurd (which stood near to Castle street, but of which not a trace now remains) was several times besieged during the reign of King Robert the Bruce, and it remained a principal strong point until the battle of Langside, 13 May, 1568, soon after which the Regent Murray, to revenge himself on the Hamilton family, in whose custody it then was, ordered it to be destroyed. The town now comprises an area of 2,218 acres; burgh, 870 acres; the population in 1891 was 16,185, and in 1901, 20,954; the royal burgh at the latter date having 18,279; rateable value, 1909-10, £232,216, including the royal burgh.

The population of the police burgh in 1901 was 16,185, viz. East ward, 5,446; Middle ward, 5,355; West ward, 5,385.

The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 21,090.

Wardlawhill and West Church are quoad sacra parishes in Rutherford civil parish; the population of the former in 1891 was 2,092, and in 1901, 4,528; that of the latter in 1891 was 3,165, and in 1901, 3,527.

The area of Pollokshaws burgh is 166 acres; the population of the wards in Pollokshaws police burgh (exclusive of shipping) in 1901 was:—First, or North-Eastern, 2,402; Second, or South-Western, 3,407; Third, or Central, 2,442; Fourth, or Western, 3,031.

The population of Pollokshaws ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 8,502.

The Municipal area of the city of Glasgow is 12,705 acres (the Parliamentary area is 6,111 acres). The rental or gross annual value of the municipality under the Lands Valuation Acts in 1895-6, £3,955,844; in 1899-1, £3,455,510; in 1899-10, £3,523,625; in 1901-2, £3,543,955; in 1901-2, £5,003,043; in 1902-3, £5,497,186; in 1903-4, £5,899,941; in 1905-6, £5,770,571; in 1906-7, £5,840,236.

The population of the civil parish of Glasgow in 1901 was 571,525, including 324 patients, 10 officers and 295 families of officials &c. in Belvidere Hospital; 159 officials and 566 patients in the Royal Infirmary; 207 officials and 499 patients in Buchill Fever Hospital; 15 officials, 411 patients and 209 families of officials in the Western Infirmary; 180 in the Deaf and Dumb Institution; 44 officials and 1,320 inmates of Glasgow (Barnhill) Poorhouse; 64 officials and 1,603 inmates of Glasgow (City) Poorhouse; 404 in Mossbank Industrial School for Boys; 482 Military and 215 non-military &c. in Maryhill Barracks and 88 officials and 976 prisoners in Barlinnie Prison.

The area of Pollokshaws is a town and burgh of barony, in the parish of Eastwood, county of Renfrew, 23 miles west from Glasgow, on the road to Irvine and near to the White Cart river, in a pleasing valley sheltered by plantations, and has a station on the Caledonian and on the Glasgow and Kilmarnock joint railways. The town consists of several well-built but somewhat irregular streets. The trade of the place is considerable, there being extensive establishments for weaving and dyeing, bleaching fields, paper works, iron foundries, engineering works, and establishments for the manufacture of entertainments, together furnishing employment to the greater portion of the inhabitants. Pollokshaws was erected into a burgh of barony in 1814, in favour of Sir John Maxwell baron, of Pollok, and the government of the town was then vested in a provost, one bailie, six councillors, and a treasurer, but under the "Police Act of 1892," the governing body has been increased to 12 members, inclusive of a provost and four bailies. A justice of the peace court is held weekly for small debt civil cases, and a burgh police court daily, for the disposal of criminal cases. There is a good public library. A new Burgh Hall was built in 1896 by Sir John Stirling-Maxwell bart. M.P. at an estimated cost of between £15,000 and £50,000, from the designs of Dr. Rowand Anderson, Rutland square, Edinburgh, and has a tower with spire; the hall will hold about 800 people. There are branches here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the British Linen Bank. The parish of Eastwood is four miles in length by three in breadth, and is bounded on the north and east by Govan and Cathcart, on the south by Neilston and Mearns, and on the west by the parish of Paisley. The district is generally well cultivated, and abounds in freestone; and, besides the stream of the White Cart, is watered by the Auldhous burn. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 & 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), the part of Eastwood parish known as Glasgow Suburban was transferred to Lanarkshire. The area of Eastwood civil parish is 5,659 acres; rateable value, £166,045. The population in 1901 was 18,500, viz.: Pollokshaws, 11,595; Thornliebank, 2,452; landward, 5,079.

M.P. at an estimated cost of between £15,000 and £50,000, from the designs of Dr. Rowand Anderson, Rutland square, Edinburgh, and has a tower with spire; the hall will hold about 800 people. There are branches here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the British Linen Bank. The parish of Eastwood is four miles in length by three in breadth, and is bounded on the north and east by Govan and Cathcart, on the south by Neilston and Mearns, and on the west by the parish of Paisley. The district is generally well cultivated, and abounds in freestone; and, besides the stream of the White Cart, is watered by the Auldhous burn. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 & 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), the part of Eastwood parish known as Glasgow Suburban was transferred to Lanarkshire. The area of Eastwood civil parish is 5,659 acres; rateable value, £166,045. The population in 1901 was 18,500, viz.: Pollokshaws, 11,595; Thornliebank, 2,452; landward, 5,079.

The area of Pollokshaws burgh is 166 acres; the population of the wards in Pollokshaws police burgh (exclusive of shipping) in 1901 was:—First, or North-Eastern, 2,402; Second, or South-Western, 3,407; Third, or Central, 2,442; Fourth, or Western, 3,031.

The population of Pollokshaws ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 8,502.

Thornliebank is a village and quoad sacra parish in the parish of Eastwood, lying a little to the south of Pollokshaws, in a beautiful hollow, watered by the Auldhous burn, and 5 miles south-west from Glasgow Royal Exchange. Calico printing and Turkey red dyeing are carried on here to a great extent, and the printed fabrics produced are of considerable excellence. There are two railway stations, each about half a mile from the village; Thornliebank on the Bury and East Kilbride section of the Caledonian railway and Kennishhead on the Barrhead and Kilmarnock section of the Glasgow and South Western and the Caledonian joint railway. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 2,856, and of the town, Kennishhead, half a mile distant, comprises a few private residences.

Post & M. O. & T. O. Office; Miss Mary L. Deans, sub-postmistress. Letters through Glasgow. Deliveries, 7.30 a.m. & 1.45 & 5.45 p.m.; Sundays, to callers, 9 to 10 a.m.; dispatches, 7.30 a.m. & 12.45, 4.35 & 7.30 p.m.; sundays, 3.15 p.m.

Springburn, 23 miles north; Parkhead, 2 miles east; Tollcross, 3 miles east; and Shettleston, 21 miles south-east, are places situated at the above distances from Glasgow, and contain factories and works of various kinds, giving employment to a large number of inhabitants.

The following are quoad sacra parishes with their populations in 1901:—Springburn, 30,848; Shettleston, 30,493 in the quoad sacra parish, and 12,154 in the town; Tollcross is a small town in Shettleston ecclesiastical parish, population in 1901, 7,221.

Bishopbriggs is a large village and suburb of Glasgow, in the parish of Cadder, 36 miles north-east from Glasgow, with a station on the Glasgow and Edinburgh section of the North British railway; it is also connected with Glasgow by the electric tramway. The population in 1901 was 1,136.

Post, Yr. O. O. & T. O.; Mrs. Janet Paterson, postmistress. Letters received through Glasgow. Delivered, 7.15 a.m. 12 noon & 5.40 p.m.; dispatched, 8.50 & 11.10 a.m. & 4.30 & 8.10 p.m.; sun. 7.30 a.m.

This is a list of names and addresses for various streets and areas in Glasgow, including medical practitioners, merchants, and other professionals. The directory is organized by street names, with addresses listed in a roughly alphabetical order. The names are typically those of individuals, often with the title of their occupation following their name, such as surgeon, tailor, or tailor tailor. The directory is a snapshot of the Glasgow area as of the time it was compiled, providing a glimpse into the community's structure and occupations. The document appears to be a printed directory, likely used as a reference guide for the local population.

THE GLASGOW AND WEST OF SCOTLAND TECHNICAL COLLEGE.
The College was established in 1836 by an Order in Council amalgamating several old institutions, notably Anderson's College, founded in 1756, and the first technical college in the kingdom; the College of Science and Arts, the successor of the first Mechanics' Institute; the "Young" Chair of Technical Chemistry; Allan Glen's Institution; and the Atkinson Institution. The College, as now constituted, offers complete courses of instruction of University standard in pure and applied science, and is specially designed to give the most suitable education to students intending to enter an industrial profession or trade. The complete course of study extends over at least three years, but students are a liberty to enter for any less period. The instruction in both day and evening classes is made as practical as possible, and there are fully equipped laboratories in the department of physics, chemistry, technical chemistry, dyeing, metallurgy, mechanics, mechanical engineering, electrical engineering, mining, textile manufacture, biology, bacteriology and navigation. The museums contain several important collections, and the library consists of about 10,000 volumes, including many valuable works. The reading room is provided with the current issues of the principal scientific and technical journals. The diplomas of the College carry with it the title of "Associate of the Glasgow and West of Scotland Technical College," and associates are eligible for admission to the final examinations for the degree of B.Sc. in Engineering Glasgow University after attendance upon prescribed classes in the University for at least one session. There are many valuable bursaries and scholarships in connection with the College.

The Leadenhall Press, Ltd., manufacturers of the well known STICKPHAST PASTE, are now manufacturing various Grades of

"FIXOL" PASTES
IN BULK FOR MANUFACTURERS.

The "FIXOL" Pastes are all scientifically prepared to exact formulae, and are suitable for use in all climates.

FREE SAMPLES.—A selection of Samples will be sent free on application; after which a 28-lb. keg of the Grade chosen will be forwarded, carriage paid, at the nominal charge of 3/6, the usual price for 28 lbs. being 5/-.

SOME OPINIONS.

Extract from the "LANCET."

"FIXOL. We have given this excellent Paste considerable practical trial with very satisfactory results. It consists of a modified Starch, manufactured in a special manner, which renders it glairy and, at the same time, tenacious, and is very clean to use. The Paste is quite permanent, and contains an agreeable antiseptic, and offers great advantages where large quantities are in constant use, as in newspaper offices and other places where labelling is required."

Messrs. CARTER'S SEED CO., write:
"We beg to state that "FIXOL" gives us every satisfaction, and we are now using it in lieu of glue for making up our card-board boxes."

Messrs. CROSSE & BLACKWELL, Ltd., write:
""FIXOL" is the best medium we know of, and we propose to continue its use."

Messrs. SALMON & GLUCKSTEIN, Ltd., write:
"We have used "FIXOL" for some considerable time for labelling purposes, and it has given us great satisfaction."

KELLY'S CUSTOMS TARIFFS

THIS WORK comprises the various Customs Tariffs in force in all countries. Formerly they were issued as a section of Kelly's Directory of the Merchants, Manufacturers and Shippers of the World, but owing to the enormous proportions that Guide has attained, it was considered expedient to issue them in a separate volume.

The Tariffs are arranged to show the weights and measures prevailing in the respective countries, and against each article the amount chargeable as duty is given in the currency of that country.

By the use of the Index, Exporters are enabled to see at a glance what duty, if any, is levied on any article imported into any country.

KELLY'S DIRECTORY
ENGINEERS,
Iron & Metal Trades, and COLLIERY PROPRIETORS
ENGLAND, SCOTLAND AND WALES,
With the Principal Towns in IRELAND, the CHANNEL ISLANDS, and ISLE OF MAN.

Price 30-.

The Work is on the same plan as the previous Editions, and the information has been thoroughly revised and corrected up to the latest possible date. It contains:

1. Every ascertainable name in the Towns and Villages alphabetically arranged under each County;
2. The names under each particular Trade, in London and its Suburbs, alphabetically arranged;
3. The names for the rest of England, Scotland and Wales similarly arranged;
4. The names for Ireland arranged under Towns and Trades; and
5. The names for the Channel Islands and Isle of Man also arranged under Towns.

The populations (according to the 1901 census), the Market Days, and the Weekly Half-Holidays, will be found under each town.

By these several Sections the Book is rendered as complete as possible for local as well as general use.

Trade Directories

OF ENGLAND, SCOTLAND AND WALES AND THE PRINCIPAL TOWNS OF IRELAND.

These books deal with the Industries indicated by their respective titles, together with all the trades in any way associated with them. It is impossible to describe in this short account the scope of the Directories, but lists of the trades included in the various volumes may be obtained from the Publishers.

They all contain (1) the towns and villages arranged alphabetically under Counties, the market day and early closing day of each town being shown; (2) an alphabetical arrangement under each particular trade in London; (3) a similar arrangement for England, Scotland and Wales, and (4) the names for Ireland, the Channel Islands, and the Isle of Man, arranged under Trades.

By means of these books anyone is enabled readily to put himself in communication with the members of any particular trade throughout the United Kingdom.
